MORE ABOUT THE FIELDS AT FALL CREEK

THE LAND

Approximately 300 acres of open pasture form the heart of the farm, historically managed for cattle production and wildlife habitat. While portions of the pasture would benefit from restoration, the foundation is firmly in place—fenced and cross-fenced, with gravity-fed spring water supplying livestock and wildlife year-round. A well-established internal road and trail system allows efficient access across the property for ranch operations, land management, and hunting.

Water is a defining feature of The Fields at Fall Creek. Five named creeks—Pond Creek, Lamb Creek, Clark Branch, Johnson Branch, and Austin Branch—originate along the bluff and flow through the property, creating strong riparian corridors and reliable water sources. A half-acre pond, currently holding substantial water and attracting migrating waterfowl, offers both aesthetic and recreational value, with the potential for future expansion.

The property is widely recognized as a premier Tennessee hunting property, supporting healthy populations of whitetail deer, turkey, dove, and small game. A long-established dove field has a proven history of consistent hunts. Additional income potential exists through hunting leases, timber management, mineral rights, and expanded cattle operations.

Historically regarded as one of the most well-maintained and visually striking farms in the region, the land showcases exceptional soils, grasses, and vegetation. The property can regain its former prominence with thoughtful management and renewed investment. Previous ownership implemented extensive land stewardship efforts, including the planting of over 44,000 trees, such as walnut, white oak, swamp oak, pine, and fruit-bearing trees and shrubs. The bluff-top area, known locally as Yellow Cliff, was leased in the past for hang gliding, highlighting the property's diverse recreational appeal.

IMPROVEMENTS

The property is improved with a 4,500± square-foot residence well suited for a family estate, corporate retreat, or hunting lodge. The home is serviced by both spring water and city water and is positioned to overlook pastureland, gardens, an orchard, and nearby barns. A pole barn provides substantial hay and equipment storage, while a red barn, more than 100 years old, stands as a historic focal point of the farm, framed by dramatic rock bluffs and sweeping views.

An additional brick home located near the entrance offers ideal accommodations for guests, extended family, or on-site management, providing privacy while remaining connected to the core of the property.

MORE ABOUT THE FIELDS AT FALL CREEK

LOCATION & DEVELOPMENT POTENTIAL

Situated within an Opportunity Zone, The Fields at Fall Creek presents compelling residential, agricultural, or commercial development potential. The property boasts extensive road frontage along Old State Highway 28, Highway 127, Sutherland Road, Blue Sewanee Road, and Pope Road, with utilities—including water, power, gas, and cable—available along much of the frontage. Additionally, eight water taps are already installed. Buyers and buyer agents will need to verify the availability of these utilities prior to closing. Elevated bluff-top building sites near 1,800 feet in elevation offer panoramic views of the Sequatchie Valley.

Conveniently located roughly five miles north of Dunlap, the property provides easy access to Highway 111 and is just 40 minutes from Chattanooga, balancing privacy with accessibility. Buyers are encouraged to verify all existing and potential utilities.
